Nature's One® Breaks Ground on a Dedicated Organic Infant Nutritional Facility

Nature's One, the leader in organic pediatric nutrition, is investing $32-million to build the world's first dedicated Organic Infant Nutritional Facility. Located in the City of Heath, Ohio, the manufacturing facility will be a fully integrated FDA-approved infant formula spray-drying operation with liquid aseptic filling and packaging capabilities.

Jay Highman, Founder and CEO of Nature's One says, "We were the first to introduce an organic baby formula in the United States; the first and still only to innovate an organic DHA phospholipid, a fatty-acid critical to brain and eye development; and now we will be the first to build a dedicated organic infant powder formula facility. This certainly shows our commitment to organic purity and protecting babies, a parent's first and most precious responsibility."

Highman continues, "No other infant formula company can protect from incidental chemical, pesticide and GMO exposure without a dedicated facility. Our new Organic Infant Nutritional Facility will be the most technologically advanced Infant Nutritional Facility in the world utilizing purified water from deep, pure aquifers and the highest level of HEPA air purification systems."

The new facility will also allow Nature's One to curate smaller batch formulations for specialty dietary needs, like plant-based proteins, low lactose and "gentle" formulations for sensitive tummies. The boutique facility approach allows for better "hands-on" monitoring of each batch insuring more accurate testing and the highest possible quality. Highman ends saying, "this will be the first significant improvement in organic infant nutrition since the glass baby bottle."
